

Cabinet Office statement on publication of The National Archives' Information Management Assessment report

January 2019

I welcome The National Archives' Assessment Report, which provides assurance that Cabinet Office's records and information management systems are effective.

We are not complacent, however, and Cabinet Office will work closely with The National Archives to address the report's recommendations.

We will also continue to work with our partners across government to ensure that we respond to the unique challenges presented by digital information management.
