

The Crown Prosecution Service Information Management Assessment Report and Action Plan

I am pleased to champion the publication of a report by The National Archives (TNA) on our approach to information management.

In July 2017, TNA carried out an assessment of the Crown Prosecution Service as part of the cross-government Information Management Assessment programme and reviewed our information, knowledge and records to establish that they are appropriately captured, managed and preserved, and information risks and sensitivities are suitably handled.

I am glad to see that we have been assessed as good or satisfactory in some areas. I recognise that there are areas where we can do better. We will therefore develop an action plan to address these, notably by improving our information governance and the way we manage our information assets and risks.

Good information management is essential to the Department. We look forward to ongoing collaboration with TNA in developing and delivering on our plans.
