Brief Overview

This is a fictional adventure about a character named Beatrix who works for the Ministry of Time Travel and needs help. The Ministry of Time Travel are a secret organisation based at the heart of the National Archive – they safeguard the sands of time. In this adventure, your job is to help Beatrix save Pickles the dog, who discovered the missing World Cup trophy in 1966. You have to face the challenges from Beatrix and help her to overcome TADAH, an evil group who want to change the past for their own gain. The experience takes place on your phone and you'll receive videos throughout. You can take it at your own pace.

Detailed explanation of the experience

- You will watch a video about the National Archives and what it does. This message will be interrupted by Beatrix, asking for you to help her. She wants to know she can trust you though so asks you to find 4 letters nearby that will help you get the next video.
- Beatrix then explains that she is an Interpreter for the Ministry of Time Travel and is the only member of staff today. She needs your help as she is encountering a problem. She uses a machine called the Signal Fire System to receive warnings from the future. This warning explains that they need to investigate 1966.
- She asks you to help her unlock the rest of the message and you can do this by finding the scientific name of the tree nearby.
- Unlocking this allows Beatrix to send you information from the Signal Fire System. The Signal Fire System sends out information in mysterious ways though and your job is to interpret what happens.
- The first bit of information from the Signal Fire System is a set of instructions that you follow. You have to follow the instructions to find the codeword that Beatrix needs.
- The codeword allows Beatrix to understand what really happened. That the World Cup trophy was stolen and the instructions you followed were actually the route the robbers took.
- Beatrix sends through the next bit of information, which is a ransom letter from a robber called Betchley who sent it to Joe Mears, the head of the FA & Chelsea F.C.
- After reading this Beatrix, reveals that she is worried that something has been changed in the past and that she needs you to find your way to a place where you can work together to 'nudge' the past. Nudging is the way to fix moments in the past.
- After you find your way to the special Antenna outside in The National Archives grounds you must remember keys bits of information about what really happened and send this information back through time to ensure it happens as it is meant to. You do this by selecting the real response that happened. If you get it wrong though you will have another chance to fix the past.
- Completing this makes Beatrix very happy but she realises there is more to be done. She has found another bit of information from the Signal Fire System and asks you to investigate it. It means you must go into the National Archives and find a briefcase in one of the lockers.

- Finding the briefcase, you have to open it and send information on what is inside. The word 'TADAH' is the only thing inside.
- Beatrix explains that TADAH are Time Agent Disrupters Against History, and they are trying to change the past. She needs your help as she herself begins to fade away. She asks you to go up to the Chief Timer's office and use her computer to access the Signal Fire System. To do this, you have to meet one of her friends, a member of The National Archives team, who will help you find your way and give you a dog collar with the passcode to get onto her computer.
- In her office you will find an incredible room filled with strange items. On her computer you will receive messages from Beatrix who will tell you how to nudge the past. You must find the name of the owner of Pickles and the code to get into the Signal Fire System. Then you must text the number you are given with the name of the person who owned Pickles. This will make the phone in the room ring and you can answer it. This is a call from David Corbett – you just need to listen to the message. Once completed, your phone will have a message on it with the final passcode to the locked folder on the Chief Timer's Computer.
- This final video congratulates you and then it changes into another video where Beatrix is sat behind her desk. She explains that she is the Chief Timer herself and that all this adventure was a test. They did receive a message from the future, but it was a warning that they need new Time Agents and that anyone who completed the Pickles Mission would be the right people. She thanks you and welcomes you to the Ministry Of Time Travel
